DAYTIME

TITLE: "Winchester Tapes"

AIR DATE: March 6, 1979 (O.A.D. 10/18/77) (3:30-4:00 PM CNYT)

IN BRIEF: Charles dictates a letter to his parents giving his impressions of the people at the 4077th.

THE ACTION: Charles stops dictating into his tape recorder long enough to agree to take Hawkeye's place as Officer of the Day. Hawkeye has been invited to spend a weekend with a nurse in Seoul. As Charles resumes his letter, he tells his parents about his attempt to have Colonel Potter agree to transfer him to a more appropriate outfit. Next, Charles tells his parents about Radar's importance to the 4077th and how Charles was unable to bribe him into making a telephone call. A group of wounded arrive and Charles again puts down his dictating machine. After a session in the operating room, Charles tells how Father Mulcahy managed to outwit him by saying that he prayed Charles' surgical skills would be sufficient for the critical operation he was performing. Unbeknownst to Charles, Hawkeye and B.J. have been putting oversized uniforms in Charles' clothes rack in order to make him think he's losing weight. When they finally bring back his own uniforms, Charles is furious to learn he's gained three inches around the waist. Charles gets a little satisfaction by the fact that Hawkeye is too exhausted to make his planned trip to Seoul.

TITLE: "The Light That Failed"

AIR DATE: March 7, 1979 (O.A.D. 10/25/77) (3:30-4:00 PM CNYT)

IN BRIEF: A shortage of lightbulbs inconveniences the members of the 4077th and almost results in the death of a patient.

THE ACTION: Due to cold weather and delivery foul-ups, there aren't enough light bulbs, or books, to go around. B.J. receives a mystery novel in the mail and circulates it by ripping out each chapter as he finishes it. When he comes to the end he discovers that the last two pages are missing. These pages would have contained the solution to the murder mystery. All those who have been reading the novel try to surmise the ending. Meanwhile, Charles makes a mistake in the operating room which almost costs a patient his life. He blames the error on the lack of adequate lighting, but Hawkeye refuse to allow him to make excuses for such a serious error.

SERIES: M*A*S*H DAYTIME
TITLE: "In Love and War"
AIR DATE: March 8, 1979 (O.A.D. 11/1/77) (3:30-4:00 PM CNYT)
IN BRIEF: Hawkeye falls in love with a cultured Korean woman.

THE ACTION: Kyung Soon, a sophisticated Korean woman, appears to exert undue influence in obtaining priority medical attention for a child. Thus, when Potter orders Hawkeye to go with her to attend to Kyung Soon's ill mother, Hawkeye makes no attempt to contain his sarcasm. However, upon reaching the bombed-out estate and seeing the effort Kyung Soon has put forth into caring for numerous homeless peasants, Hawkeye's attitude changes. Gradually, their mutual interests and attraction lead to love. The morning after their picnic date at a bombed-out restaurant, Hawkeye and Kyung Soon say a reluctant goodbye in her bedroom. He tells her he'll be back as soon as he can. Hawkeye is in the operating room when a boy from Kyung Soon's estate comes by asking him to come see her mother. By the time Hawkeye arrives, the old woman is dead. After the funeral, Kyung Soon tells Hawkeye that she must leave Oui Jung Bu. She explains that she only stayed out of respect for her mother. Hawkeye has a difficult time accepting this, but in the end he lets her go.

DAYTIME

TITLE: "Change Day"

AIR DATE: March 9, 1979 (O.A.D. 11/8/77) (3:30-4:00 PM CNYT)

IN BRIEF: Charles tries to use the exchange of old Army script, for new legal tender, as an occasion to take advantage of the Korean peasants.

THE ACTION: After Colonel Potter announces that Headquarters will be issuing new military money as a way of combating counterfeiters and black marketeers, Charles tells his Korean tailor, Mr. Kim, that he won't pay for his new suit unless Mr. Kim convinces the locals to sell their old script to Charles. The profit to Charles would be ninety percent. Mr. Kim tells Hawkeye and B.J. the situation and they arrange to have Charles detained by the military police, until after the money transfer has been completed. Charles is thus unable to exchange the money he bought from the Koreans. Meanwhile, Hawkeye is very concerned over having lost four hundred dollars which was entrusted to him by a patient. Father Mulcahy issues a strong demand for the return of the stolen money and no one is more excited than he, when someone leaves $400 in new script in his tent.
